Vice President &
Controller,
Lockheed Martin
Space

Michael Dweck, vice president and controller for Lockheed Martin Space. In his current role, Michael oversees Accounting, Government Compliance, Resource Management, Financial Planning & Analysis (FP&A), and Program Finance & Surveillance. Previously Dweck served as FP&A director, responsible for execution of the long range plan and leadership of financial forecasting. In this assignment and throughout his career, he has worked to build partnerships across programs, lines of business, corporate staff, customers and auditors in the joint implementation of financial strategies.

Dweck previously served as the Finance director for Navigation Systems and the Global Positioning System (GPS) Program within the Military Space line of business. In that role, he had responsibility for all financial activities within the $3B+ GPS portfolio including proposals, program finance, planning, contracts, financial planning and overhead. Dweck led financial strategies that helped GPS III grow with the addition of six production vehicles and the award of GPS III contingency operations, a key strategic win allowing Lockheed Martin to expand in the GPS ground system segment.

Dweck is a strong advocate of talent development. In 2012 he led a corporate-wide Finance and Business Operations (F&BO) tiger team focused on enhancing career development resources to improve employee growth and retention. The team developed new training resources and shared them with 9,000 finance professionals.

Dweck received a bachelor of science in Economics from the University of Pennsylvania in 2002 and an MBA with a focus in Accounting and Finance from the University of Maryland in 2007. Michael is also a graduate of the Finance Leadership Development Program, the Financial Leadership Academy and a cross-functional Executive Roundtable Mentoring Program.
